

Galerie

Live Artfully

Creative Minds

Our spectacular list of visionaries leading the worlds of art, design, jewelry, and more

SPRING 2026, ISSUE N° 44
GALERIEMAGAZINE.COM

CURATED

Elona chandelier by AERIN for VISUAL COMFORT & CO.; visualcomfort.com

Al Fresco fabric by PERENNIALS; perennialsfabrics.com

Glasses by DIOR; dior.com

Skye dining table by McKINNON AND HARRIS; mckinnonharris.com

Wrought iron lattice armchair from GALERIE GREEN; galeriegreennyc.com

For a wintergarten in a villa overlooking Lake Zurich in Switzerland, designer Ina Rinderknecht chose furnishings that mirror the surrounding greenery.

Looking Glass

“Sunrooms help extend the seasons here in Switzerland,” states Erlenbach-based designer Ina Rinderknecht. A glass-enclosed wintergarten, often affixed to a single-family home, captures daylight and maintains ties to the outdoors during long, overcast alpine winters. When renovating a palatial villa perched above Lake Zurich in picturesque Küsnacht, she transformed one of three such structures into a glasshouse dining room with the airy, cultivated ambience of an arboretum.

Rinderknecht outfitted the room with woven indoor-outdoor seating and flexible tables that shift seamlessly from everyday activities to larger occasions, complemented by rattan pendants and petrol-green glass tables that echo the resplendent landscape beyond. The room’s adaptability enables the clients to meet any moment with ease, whether hosting guests or settling in for a quiet afternoon. “Don’t limit yourself to the idea that sunrooms are just a seasonal thing,” she adds. “Treat them as a full room, whether a smoker’s lounge or a fondue chalet.” The result creates a venue for what Rinderknecht describes as “the good life,” even when the weather turns unpredictable.